4. Details of our assessment

Routine site inspection of Llanellen Wastewater Treatment Works carried out by Environment Officer Peter Jones. The weather was dry and overcast, there had been no significant rainfall in the last four days.

The permit was varied on the 28 January 2024 and issued in modern condition format.

On entering the works the flow is split in two. Each flow stream passes forward into a covered Primary Settlement Tank (PST). From the PST the effluent passes into an open chamber and exits the chamber via a siphon. The siphons ensure an even discharge from the filter bed arms onto the filter bed medium. If the rate of flow into the works slows, the rotary arms will stop moving until the flow resumes.

The flow meters are located on the feeder pipe to the filter beds. At the time of the visit, the meter reading the flow to filter bed 1 was 0 l/s and the flow meter to filter bed number 2 was reading 3.27 l/s.

During the visit it was noted both the rotary arms were working on each filter bed, providing an even distribution of effluent onto surface of the bed. There was a build up of moss and leaf litter on the filter medium, this should be removed to prevent ponding of the effluent.

From the filter beds the flow passes to the humus tanks. Wedge wires have been installed to catch solids. The effluent is then discharge to the river Usk. An easily accessible final effluent sample point has been provided.

The site diary was up to date and all section were legible.

Actions

Ensure the surface of the filter bed medium is kept free of moss and leaf litter to prevent ponding.
