4. Details of our assessment

In this document 'Natural Resources Wales' means the Natural Resources Body for Wales established by Article 3 of the Natural Resources Body for Wales (Establishment) order 2012.

On the 01/09/2025 a Natural Resources Wales (NRW) officer attended Abercegir Sewage Treatment Works discharge point after receiving a report of pollution.

Permit CG0158701 is in effect at this site, a descriptive permit.

A slightly cloudy discharge was observed, and there was clear evidence of sewage fungus (see definition below) on stones within the watercourse downstream of the discharge.

This is a breach of condition 3 ii as shown in the following screenshot of the permit:

3. As far as is reasonably practicable, the works shall be operated so as to prevent:
 - i any matter being present in the effluent which will cause the receiving water to be poisonous or injurious to fish or to their spawn or spawning grounds or food or otherwise cause damage to the ecology of the receiving waters; and
 - ii the treated effluent from having any adverse visual and other environmental impact.

Image 2. Photograph of the discharge point showing the cloudy discharged and the filamentous grey sewage fungus and discoloured stones within the watercourse.

Dwr Cymru Welsh Water were informed of the situation via a POLFAX report. They reported slight staining.

An improvement plan for the works is required to be produced, and a way forward agreed with NRW to ensure that the discharge complies with the descriptive permit in a timely manner.

Sewage Fungus –

Sewage fungus is a thick filamentous growth that develops in surface waters contaminated with organic pollutants including sewage and farm effluents. The effects of sewage fungus on a river can include lowering the dissolved oxygen in the water, making oxygen less available for fish and their eggs, as well as to the macro invertebrate fauna that live in the stream.

Ends.

If you have any queries about this report, or to discuss completion of any actions, please contact the NRW Officer named above.
