Dear Mr Thomas

Permit reference: CG0462101

Facility: 4 Parc Tyddyn, Pentraeth, Red Wharf Bay, Anglesey, LL75 8NQ

We received an enquiry regarding the Environmental Permit CG0462101 for the above named facility.

On 6th April 2010 the Environmental Permitting Regulations 2010 (EPR) made the activity that was covered by environmental permit (formally a consent to discharge) CG0462101, exempt from permitting. The permit therefore has been converted into an exemption. EPR requires that exemptions are registered to us and I can confirm that this has already been done for you.

There are a number of conditions that must be completed with in order for the exemption to remain valid, failure to adhere to these conditions means the exemption no longer applies and you would need to apply for a permit for your discharge. You can see a full list of the conditions at

<http://naturalresources.wales/media/679226/guidance-for-the-registration-of-small-sewage-effluent-discharges.pdf>

Here's a summary of some of them:

- You may only discharge domestic sewage effluent
- It must be properly treated
- You must operate and maintain your sewage treatment system as recommended by the manufacturer or by the guidance in the appropriate operating Code of Practice. This includes regular removal of excess sludge from the system.
- You must maintain the plant properly, using competent people
- You must dispose of any waste sludge removed from the sewage treatment system in an appropriate controlled way using competent disposal contractors

You are however required to inform, in writing, any new occupier of:

- The fact the an exempt activity is being carried out
