Reports of discolouration and polystyrene in the Nantmelyn watercourse, tributary of the River Clydach

Section of watercourse from the culvert exit to the waterfall appeared discoloured and laden with silt, some polystyrene also evident. Watercourse appeared to flow through Waste Transfer Station (Thomas Waste Management). Watercourse above the waste site was flowing clear and free of contaminants into the culvert.

Met with Thomas Waste Management site manager Gareth Thomas. Discussed that there had been a report of discoloration to the watercourse below the site. Upon further inspection source of discharge identified. Silt laden water from site run-off discharging into watercourse in the SW area of site. No mitigation in place.
